RETURNS & REFUNDS

Return Policy

PixelForge wants customers to feel confident when purchasing gaming hardware, computer components, and accessories online. This return policy explains how customers can return products, which conditions apply, and what happens after a return has been requested.

The policy applies to purchases made through the PixelForge online store by customers in Sweden. It does not limit any mandatory rights provided by Swedish consumer protection legislation.

Right of Withdrawal

Consumers purchasing products online generally have a statutory right to withdraw from their purchase within 14 days after receiving the goods. For orders delivered in multiple shipments, the withdrawal period normally begins when the final item has been received.

PixelForge also offers a voluntary 30-day return period for standard products. This additional return period allows customers to request a return within 30 calendar days of receiving their order, provided the conditions described below are satisfied.

The voluntary return policy does not replace or reduce the customer's statutory withdrawal rights. Different conditions may apply to certain specially manufactured or personalized products where an applicable legal exception exists.

Conditions for Returning Products

Products returned under PixelForge's voluntary 30-day return policy should be complete, reasonably clean, and free from damage caused by improper handling. Customers should include all original accessories, cables, manuals, and other items supplied with the product.

Original packaging should be retained whenever possible, particularly for sensitive electronic components. However, the absence of original packaging does not automatically remove a customer's statutory right of withdrawal.

Customers are permitted to inspect and test products to the extent necessary to establish their nature, characteristics, and functionality. Handling beyond what is necessary may result in a deduction for diminished value where permitted by law.

Products With Special Return Conditions

Certain products require additional consideration. Specially manufactured or clearly personalized products may be excluded from withdrawal rights when the relevant legal conditions are met.

Prebuilt gaming PCs sold in standard configurations are generally covered by the ordinary withdrawal rules. A computer does not automatically become exempt simply because PixelForge assembled it before delivery.

Products containing customer data, such as SSDs, hard drives, and computers, should be backed up and securely erased before being returned. PixelForge cannot guarantee the preservation of files stored on returned equipment.

How to Request a Return

Customers should contact PixelForge customer support and provide their order number, the products they wish to return, and the reason for the request if they choose to share it.

A customer exercising a statutory withdrawal right does not need to provide a reason. The withdrawal request must be communicated within the applicable withdrawal period.

Support will provide return instructions, including the appropriate return address and any available shipping label. Customers should package products carefully and retain proof of shipment.

After notifying PixelForge of withdrawal, customers normally have 14 days to send the goods back.

Return Shipping Costs

For ordinary returns under the right of withdrawal or the voluntary return policy, customers are generally responsible for direct return shipping costs when this has been communicated before purchase.

PixelForge covers reasonable return shipping costs for verified faulty products, incorrect items, and products damaged during delivery when the return is handled as an accepted complaint.

Customers should contact support before returning unusually large or heavy products, including gaming PCs and monitors, so that suitable transportation can be arranged.

Inspection of Returned Products

Returned products are inspected after arriving at the PixelForge warehouse. The inspection checks that the correct product has been received and evaluates its condition, accessories, and any reported defects.

The inspection normally begins within three business days after the return has been registered as received. More complicated technical assessments may require additional time.

A return inspection does not remove the customer's statutory rights. Any proposed deduction or rejection must be supported by the circumstances of the specific return.

Refunds and Processing Times

For statutory withdrawals, refunds are handled according to applicable legal deadlines. PixelForge may generally withhold reimbursement until the goods have been received or the customer has provided evidence that they have been sent back, whichever occurs first.

For approved returns under the voluntary 30-day policy, PixelForge normally initiates the refund within five business days after the return inspection has been completed.

Refunds are generally issued through the original payment method. The payment provider may require an additional 3–5 business days to make the funds visible in the customer's account.

For more detailed information about refund methods and payment processing, see Refund Process. For damaged or defective deliveries, consult Damaged Products.