PAYMENTS

Invoices & Receipts

PixelForge provides purchase documentation to help customers keep track of payments, verify order details, and manage warranty or return requests.

The type of documentation available depends on the payment method used and whether the purchase was completed as a private consumer or on behalf of a business.

Order Confirmations

After a customer completes checkout, PixelForge normally sends an order confirmation to the email address provided during the purchase.

The confirmation includes the order number, purchased products, quantities, prices, applicable discounts, delivery charges, and the total order value.

An order confirmation records the details of a purchase but is not always equivalent to a final payment receipt or an invoice.

Customers should retain the confirmation because the order number is useful when contacting support, requesting a return, or submitting a warranty claim.

Payment Receipts

Customers who complete payment using a card or Swish may receive a digital payment receipt or transaction confirmation.

Receipts normally identify the purchase amount, transaction date, payment method, and relevant order reference.

Depending on the payment provider, the payment confirmation may be delivered separately from the PixelForge order confirmation.

Customers should check their email inbox and spam folder if expected documentation does not arrive.

Invoice Purchases

When invoice payment is selected, the invoice is normally issued and administered by the external payment provider.

The invoice includes the payment amount, due date, payment instructions, and any applicable reference number.

Customers must follow the payment instructions provided on the invoice rather than transferring money directly to PixelForge unless explicitly instructed to do so.

Questions about invoice due dates, payment registration, or instalment arrangements may need to be handled by the payment provider.

Invoice Payment Deadlines

The payment deadline depends on the invoice provider and the terms accepted during checkout. A common invoice period may be 14 or 30 days, but customers must follow the date stated on their individual invoice.

If an invoice is not paid by the due date, reminder fees, interest, or other charges may apply according to the provider's terms and applicable law.

Customers who believe an invoice is incorrect should contact the payment provider and PixelForge support as soon as possible rather than ignoring the payment request.

VAT and Price Information

Product prices shown to private consumers in the PixelForge store include applicable Swedish VAT unless otherwise stated.

Purchase documentation identifies the relevant amounts and tax information according to the type of transaction and applicable invoicing requirements.

The standard Swedish VAT rate for most gaming hardware and computer accessories is 25 percent.

Business customers who require specific invoicing information should ensure that accurate company details are supplied during checkout.

Correcting Invoice Information

Customers who discover an incorrect name, billing address, or other detail on their purchase documentation should contact PixelForge support.

Some corrections may be possible before an invoice has been finalized. Other changes may require the payment provider to issue corrected documentation.

PixelForge cannot guarantee that all invoice details can be changed after a completed transaction, particularly when legal accounting requirements apply.

Receipts for Guest Purchases

Customers do not need a registered PixelForge account to receive purchase documentation when guest checkout is available.

Order confirmations and payment information are sent to the email address provided during checkout.

Customers who lose their confirmation may contact support with information that helps identify the purchase, such as the approximate purchase date and email address used.

For security reasons, support may require identity verification before sharing sensitive transaction information.

Documentation for Returns and Warranty Claims

An order confirmation, receipt, invoice, or other reliable proof of purchase can help establish when and where a product was purchased.

Customers are encouraged to retain purchase documentation throughout the expected product lifetime.

A missing paper receipt does not automatically remove statutory consumer rights when the purchase can be demonstrated through other evidence.

For warranty conditions, see Warranty Policy. For return procedures, consult Return Policy.

Credit Notes and Refund Adjustments

When a purchase is cancelled or refunded, an invoice provider may issue a credit note or adjust the outstanding invoice balance.

If a customer has already paid an invoice, the payment provider may arrange reimbursement according to its procedures.

Customers should not assume that an invoice has been cancelled until the payment provider confirms the adjustment.

For more information about refund processing, see Refund Process.

Accounting and Record Retention

PixelForge retains accounting information as required by Swedish bookkeeping legislation. Certain accounting records generally need to be preserved for seven years.

This means that some transaction information may remain stored even after a customer requests account deletion.

For details about personal data retention and individual rights, consult Personal Data & GDPR.